3RD SEMESTER

REQUIRED COURSES

PLN 201 PLANNING STUDIO 2

8 Hrs/Week, Theory + Studio, 9 ECTS Credits

Objective / Contents: Planning Studio II-III where the students meet practical issues of planning for the first time plays an important role. As development paradigm and welfare state –which are the starting point of traditional planning- leave their place to globalisation process urban planning have to redefine its methodology and contents. In this changing context the planner profile who is working as a technician for public and who must solve the conflict of public and private interest have to change and redefine. In the context of public-society conflict that is examined starting from the reality of public (state) interest can be against society the relation between public and private interest must be reexamined and society interest must be highlighted. Contemporary planner has to play a role in a system which lets all parts of the society participate and interact. The planner should carry a variety of missions such as starting the process submitting the long term visions to the society guiding in order to reach the democratically defined vision creating choices via technical knowledge reconciling the groups bargaining and promoting the plan in case. In order to manage these missions team work is certainly necessary moreover students should be professionalized in some areas of education system without losing track of other issues. An education policy of this professionalizing context will make the graduates create and promote their own projects on urban parts in the restricted employment market.

PLN 239E READING ISTANBUL

2 Hrs/Week, Theory, 3 ECTS Credits

Aim of the Course: The aim of the course is to focus one of the subjects (such as urban regeneration, high-rise buildings, public transportation projects/investments etc.) of this dynamic agenda, develop a better understanding around the selected subject with thematic readings and create an art work/design project etc. related to the city's realities, instead of using the city only as a scene of the art/design work.

Istanbul is a very important laboratory for urban planning and design with its historical background, spatial characteristics and urban culture, there fore it is very inspiring for art production processes. The agenda of the Istanbul changes rapidly according to the active and international character of the city. As a result, the agenda of the professionals who works on the city have to be dynamic. Some of the important topics fall behind because of this dynamism and replaced by other topics without enough discussions.

Students from Arts background will have the chance to discuss the planning topics and literature, to develop a different view for reading / understanding the city. All the information - discussions will give inspiration and boost the creation process.

Students from Urban Planning back ground will find a chance to develop an alternative view to the city and produce design projects related to the selected theme.

Lecture offers a multi disciplinary discussion/production studio for Erasmus students and MSGSU students who wants to understand, discuss and produce on Istanbul.

4TH SEMESTER

REQUIRED COURSES

PLN 202 PLANNING STUDIO 3

8 Hrs/Week, Theory + Studio, 9 ECTS Credits

Objective / Contents: Planning Studio II-III where the students meet practical issues of planning for the first time plays an important role. As development paradigm and welfare state –which are the starting point of traditional planning- leave their place to globalisation process urban planning have to redefine its methodology and contents. In this changing context the planner profile who is working as a technician for public and who must solve the conflict of public and private interest have to change and redefine. In the context of public-society conflict that is examined starting from the reality of public (state) interest can be against society the relation between public and private interest must be reexamined and society interest must be highlighted. Contemporary planner has to play a role in a system which lets all parts of the society participate and interact. The planner should carry a variety of missions such as starting the process submitting the long term visions to the society guiding in order to reach the democratically defined vision creating choices via technical knowledge reconciling the groups bargaining and promoting the plan in case. In order to manage these missions team work is certainly necessary moreover students should be professionalized in some areas of education system without losing track of other issues. An education policy of this professionalizing context will make the graduates create and promote their own projects on urban parts in the restricted employment market.

PLN 238 MEDIATIC CITY: READING CITIES OUT MEDIA

2 Hrs/Week, Theory, 3 ECTS Credits

Objective / Contents: The course focuses on the concepts of perception and image as the main components of defining city identity in planning and urban design. Evaluations of city identity and image, different approaches to the subject and contemporary trends will be discussed in the context of urban design history. On the other hand, visual communication elements and different types of communication technologies have an increasing role in the city scape in contemporary world; especially the language developed by cinema, video and graphics while perceiving and reflecting the city, understanding these alternative approaches help planners / designers to develop a new vision to understand the city.

City branding and Image creation for cities have a very strong role beyond physical context in today's cities; they have many different roles from attracting new investments to developing belonging and public participation. Especially in the global network, cities try to differentiate and compete according to their characteristics, where urban identity, image and branding have a serious role. Also for creating livable urban environments, the role of the image will be discussed.

PLN 449 THEMATIC PRODUCTION STUDIO ON ISTANBUL

2 Hrs/Week, Theory, 3 ECTS Credits

Aim of the Course: The aim of the course is to focus one of the subjects (such as urban regeneration, high-rise buildings, public transportation projects/investments etc.) of this dynamic agenda, develop a better understanding around the selected subject with thematic readings and create an art work/design project etc. related to the city's realities, instead of using the city only as a scene of the art/design work. Istanbul is a very important laboratory for urban planning and design with its historical background, spatial characteristics and urban culture, there fore it is very inspiring for art production processes. The agenda of the Istanbul changes rapidly according to the active and international character of the city. As a result, the agenda of the professionals who works on the city have to be dynamic. Some of the important topics fall behind because of this dynamism and replaced by other topics without enough discussions.

Students from Arts background will have the chance to discuss the planning topics and literature, to develop a differenet view for reading / understanding the city. All the information - discussions will give inspiration and boost the creation process.

Students from Urban Planning back ground will find a chance to develop an alternative view to the city and produce design projects related to the selected theme.

Lecture offers a multi disciplinary discussion/production studio for Erasmus students and MSGSU students who wants to understand, discuss and produce on Istanbul.

PLN 8440 URBAN REGIONS AND PLANNING

2 Hrs/Week, Theory, 3 ECTS Credits

Objective / Contents: "Urban regions", which has been included into the literature of planning as a new regional scale, comes out as a concept that qualifies density/accumulation, agglomeration and metropolitan areas. Even though there are slight differences between these issues, they occur because of the spread and development of cities. The dynamic development of urban regions, which is beyond the administrative and political borders, causes alteration and transformation in the structure of settling systems and characteristics of countryside-urban. The complicated structure, which consistently gets more complicated, and the increasing anxiety for sustainability make modern planning and management approaches required to be enhanced .In the context of this course, the refining meaning of urban regions and the approaches of planning and management in developed and developing countries in terms of providing the enhancement of sustainable cultivation will be evaluated.

PLN 352s EUROPEAN URBAN HISTORY

2 Hrs/Week, Theory, 3 ECTS Credits

Objective / Contents: This course aims to trace the historical path of the urban dynamics from the Ancient City to the Second World War which is canonically categorized as being 'uniquely European'. The term 'European' in the name of the course refers to the dynamic relations between urbanization and modernity, capitalism/the process of capital accumulation and its related actors and material culture and it does NOT refer to an allegedly non-changing historico-geographical unity. The course focuses each week on a particular historical period that scrutinizes a specific urban phenomenon. For this empirical information of a specific city will be consulted which reflects the particularities of this phenomenon in an appropriate manner. The aim of the course is that students of Urban and Regional Planning acquire a notion about the topographical, econological and economic dimensions of urbanization and its actors; the social, economic and cultural struggles where the city acts as the stage; the formation of public and private spheres and their shifts; change in the city-state relationship and the historical continuities and ruptures of the cultural creation in the cities. The theoretical and empirical texts of historywriting on the historical segments in the city will be accompanied by novels reflecting in a lively manner the spirit of the corresponding period.

Pre-requisite:-

Assessment Methods:

Book review on a book from the reading list: 30% (5 pages)

Participation and attendance: 20%

Term paper focussing on a period/problematic of a specific city: 50%
